Historically, women's contributions have been undervalued and underrepresented in official statistics and decision-making processes.

However, recent decades have seen a paradigm shift. Factors such as urbanization, changing economic policies, access to education, and technological advancements have begun to redefine women's roles in agriculture. Particularly in developing countries, women are increasingly participating in commercial farming activities that generate income beyond subsistence needs.

This transition is driven by multiple factors:

- Cultural norms often restrict women's access to land, especially inherited or family-owned plots.

Limited Access to Financial Services
